2) Read the following passage and answer the questions

Ants are probably one of the smallest and commonest creatures in the world. They live everywhere except in extremely cold polar regions. Most of us are familiar with red, black and brown ants, but did you know that there are yellow, blue, green and even purple ants? Ants are the most highly developed social insects. They always live in organized groups. A group may have hundreds, thousands or even millions of members following the rules of their society perfectly. Their societies are usually divided into three castes-the Queen, the workers and the males. The Queen does not rule the society. Her main role is to start a new group. She spends her life laying eggs. The Queen is cared for all her life by the worker ants who feed her. The worker ants, who are always females, also do other jobs like repairing and enlarging the nest and looking after the young ants. Army ants live by hunting down other live creatures.
